"Flora, here is a letter from Chesley, your Uncle William's lawyer, and he has inclosed a copy of the will."

"To whom has uncle left his property?" asked Flora. "I can only speak for that enormous mahogany bedstead by which he set so much store—the gargoyle bedstead." 'Did he leave it to me?"

"Of course he did. Don't be foolish. my dear. Listen:

"I, William Gray, being of sound mind, ctc. do give and bequeath to my grand-nice, isabel Gray, her heirs and assigns forever, my Sheraton sideboard and the sum of £,00; to my grandnice, Flora Gray Winchester, her heirs and assigns, the mahogany bedstead which stands in my own chamber and which is known as the gargoyle bedstead, together with the Presently the janitor emerged from an obscure doorway and surveyed him tearfully. "Try some of the other eyes, with an unpleasant eye.

"It ain't a-runnin'," he said gruffly "Poor management," commented Winchester as he prepared to conquer the eight flights that barred him from home and dinner.

"Huh!" exploded the man. "What with the freight elevator out er order, and people breakin' windows movin' in big stuff, and them chumps a-tryin' to put the feet board in my passenger car and a-tearin' a lady's dress, and her the landlord's sister-in-law"- He glared wrathfully at the vanishing form of Winchester.

Opening the door of his apartment. rampant disorder met his eye. A huge, dark form almost covered the floor of the tiny parlor, which in its chaotic disturbance looked strangely unfamilfar to the master of the house.

In the library Flora reclined on a couch before the bright gas log, while sympathetic Nora applied wet cloths to her mistress' aching head. Wreckage from the parlor impeded progress at every step.

"My dear girl!" he uttered.

She turned a woebegone face to his. "Such a time as they had trying to get it in the window! They were saucy because the window was too small, and one of them pulled it in with a jerk, and it struck the chandelier. The pieces of glass fell on my Wedgwood vase, and that is broken!

I-I am quite discouraged!" With a restless glance toward the parlor, where the gigantic bedstead lay like some dark shadow on his little home, and with an unpleasant recolection of the snorting janitor below stairs and of the generous tip it would require to reduce him to his customary state of patronizing familiarity, Winchester endeavored to soothe his wife's shattered nerves, and together they obeyed Nora's summons to a belated
